NEW YORK, Feb. 22.

By the arrival, this morning, of the Ann Alexander, Capt. Allen, of New Bedford, in 77 days from Dublin, London Papers to the 3d and Dublin to the 8th Dec. have been received.

A London paper of the 2d of Dec. mentions, that Bonaparte is actually engaged in composing "the Annals of his Life," and that he employs Count de las Casas as his emanuensis. The count has informed a Mr. Warden, that the Campaigns of Egypt and Italy, and what Bonaparte calls, "My reign of a hundred days," were already completed, and that the intermediate periods were in a progressive state.

A Second Meeting of the populace of London was held at Spafields, on the 2d of December.* About 20.000, it is said, were on the field. They fired upon the military, and were guilty of other acts of disorder and riot. An account of the meeting will be found below.

THE MEETING AT THE SPA-FIELDS.

ALARMING RIOTS.

From the Courier of Monday

Between eleven and twelve, crowds of persons proceeded to Spa-fields, where there might be at first about 8,000 persons. Inthe field was a coal waggon, upon which were mounted about twenty persons, chiefly in the dress of sailors. Several flags were displayed; two try couloured ones, on one of which was the following inscription:

Nature, Truth, and Justice!
Feed the Hungry!
Protect the Oppressed!
Punish Crimes!

On the second tri-coloured flag no inscription.

On a third white flag was inscribed, in red letters, the following:

The brave soldiers are our brothers, treat them kindly.

Many had bludgeons, and others pockets full of stones.

One person in the waggon then addressed the Meeting in the following strain:—I am sorry to tell you our supplication to the Prince has failed. He, the father of his people, answered—"My family have never attended to Petitons but from Oxford and Cambridge, and the city of London." And is this man the father of the people? No.—Has he listened to your petition? No—The day is come. (It is, it is, from the mob.) We must do more than words. We have been oppressed for 800 years since the Norman Conquest. If they would give you a hod, a shovel, a spade, and a hoe, your mother earth would supply you. (Aye, aye, she would. Loud applause.) Countrymen, if you will have your wrongs redressed, follow me. (That we will—Shouts

"Wat Tyler would have succeeded had he not been basely murdered by a Lord Mayor, William of Walworth. Has the Parliament done their duty? No.—Has the Regent done his duty? No. No. A man who receives one million a year public money, gives only £5,000 to the poor. They have neglected the starving people, robbed them of every thing, and given them a penny; ox bones and cold soup!—Is that fare for Englishmen? Is this to be endured? "Four millions are in distress; our brothers in Ireland, (quoting the words of the seditious handbill issued last Thursday) are in a worse state; the climax of misery is complete—it can go no further." (It shall go no farther, was clamoured out by the mob

At the end of the last speech, inviting the populace to follow the speaker from the waggon, a great many rushed from the fields, and took the direction to Newgate street, Holborn, &c.

The crowd that first left the fields proceeded with a flag at its head to Newgate street and Holborn. There they procured arms. At one shop they forced arms and powder to be given them, and fired some discharges in the air.

Mr. Egg's, the gun smith, opposite the Courier Office, is shut up. The shops in Fish street, Ludgate hill, and Fleet street, are closely shut up. There is a mob that one man has been shot who would not give arms.

It is now two o'clock while we are writing. Shops are shutting up. We shall make some further editions.

SECOND EDITION.

Courier Office half past 2 o'clock.

The mob, about 600 in number passed about half an hour ago down Holborn hill, Skinner street, and Newgate street. In Skinner street, they forced open the door of a gun smith, named Beckwith, for arms. A shot was fired from the house, which wounded one of the populace. Having got arms (about 700, as is said,) they continued their course, passing down Newgate street, breaking windows.

Among the clamours of the mob, one was "Down with the press; let us destroy the Printing Offices and property of several Papers," which they named;—(ours was among the number.)

The Horse Guards, about fifty, have just passed our office. in full gallop to the City.

Proceeding into the city, the mob went to the Royal Exchange, where several were shut in and made prisoners. From the Royal Exchange they were to go to the Corn Exchange and to Whitechapel. Mr. Beckwith has been taken to Newgate, to protect him from the mob. A letter has just been sent to the home department for troops, as a threat of attacking Newgate has been made.

By this account it will be seen, that the mob divided themselves into different parties, each threatening mischief. They threaten, among other things, to release Lord Cochrane from the King's Bench Prison.

We know that government have taken such measures at the points threatened, King's Bench Prison, Tower, Newgate, Bank, &c. that none of the menaces can be carried into execution. And riot and disturbance will end in bringing down, as they ought to do, upon the heads of those instigating or acting in them, ruin and punishment.

City half past two o'clock.

Considerable alarm has been excited by a crowd coming down Cheapside with colours flying, and several armed with guns, and other means of offence. Opposite the Mansion house they fired off a masket.—The ringleaders were immediately secured, and three or four carrying colours, in attempting to escape, were hurried into the Royal exchange, and secured. The Lord Mayor has issued a proclamation for persons immediately to proceed home in quietness. The great portion of the mob dispersed, taking the way to Mile end. They attempted to raise disturbances near the Bank, but a large detachment of soldiers immediately shewed themselves.

The Corn factors at Mark-lane took the alarm, and early shut up the market; the Exchange, and all the public places in the city, have been shut up. Large bodies of the Horse guards are stationed in every direction.

Three o'clock.

More troops have just gone into the city; others down Gray's Inn lane. Every Magistrate is on the alert, and all the Police Officers and Constables at their posts.

It was the shopman of Mr. Beckwith who was wounded; he was shot in the thigh, and his wound is said to be in a dangerous state.

THIRD EDITION.

Half past three o'clock.

The mob have gone to the bottom of the Minories, and broke open a gun-makers shop, from which they took arms, guns, pokers, etc. The guns they loaded and fired into the air, to ascertain that they were serviceable. Shortly afterwards a few Dragoons appeared, and cleared the principal part away, retaking some of the muskets and pikes.

There is a strong party of military in the Tower, artillery, and all in readiness.

The first effort at disturbances in any part of the Metropolis will be speedily and effectually put down, so judicious have been the measures adopted by Government.

London, Nov. 28.—Private letters from Spain inform us, that Col. Cholin and twelve others, were under confinement in the fortress of Pampaluna, and in daily expectation of being brought out into the public square for execution. It is said they are implicated in an extensive revolution forming in Spain, that their correspondence was intercepted; and part of the ramification of the plot discovered. This event has tended greatly to disturb king Ferdinand's honey-moon, as he perceives he is not so firmly seated in the hearts of his subjects, as his flatterers had led him to believe.

London Dec. 6.—General Vandamme, who resided for some months at Ghent, was arrested there on the 2d, and conveyed to Brussels.

On Friday summonses were unexpectedly sent off to the ministers who were within reach in the country, to attend a Cabinet Council. They were conveyed by ex...

The Cabinet ... past ...ock. It was supposed that the meeting took place in consequence of the late riots.

This is the first cabinet that has been held for upwards of two months; there has been none since Lord Castlereagh went to Ireland.

Dutch papers to the 7th instant arrived this morning.—The increase of discontent and disturbance on the French frontier provinces, has induced government to adopt extraordinary means of precaution. They are said to have been excited not more by distress than by the inflammatory and seditious publications. All seditious persons are in consequence strictly watched, and several have been sent out of the country. Among the latter is Gen. Vandamme, whose conduct in the defence of Hamburgh, was marked with so much barbarity.

The newspapers of Rome give the following account of a murder perpetrated in that city.—The assassin is Thomas Rorzoni, an ecclesiastic. Condemned to exile for a robbery, he conceived the idea of assassinating a priest named Dominique Valdamdrine, his maid-servant, and a young man who lived in the same house, and taking all the money he was in hopes of finding. The assassin had been treated with the greatest kindness by this ecclesiastic. One evening he went to his house, armed with a poiniard, told him he was condemned to exile, that he was pursued by the police officers, and solicited of him an asylum for the night, promising to quit Rome the next morning. The good old man granted his request. In the night the assassin rose with the intention of committing the crime, but the feelings of humanity and friendship got the better of him, and he renounced his plan, and returned to bed.

Next morning, having thanked the generous but imprudent old man, he departed; but in the course of the day repenting of his weakness, he returned in the evening to the priest's house, and obtained again, under a different pretence, leave to pass the night there; the enormity of his crime again stopped his criminal arm, and he went away the next morning without having perpetrated it. During this day he again repented of his weakness, and to steel his heart, had recourse to drinking. He returned to the house of the astonished ecclesiastic, who not suspecting any personal danger, was soon induced, by the artful address of this wretch, to grant him again his wish.

About the middle of the night he lighted his lamp, placed it in the room of his guest, cut his throat, and stabbed him in the breast, without his victim uttering a cry. He then went to the bed of the maid-servant, and though he stabbed her in five places with his poiniard, she still had strength to escape from the murderer, and ran to the room of her master; but seeing him weltering in his blood, she hid herself under the bed, but this monster dragged her from it by the hair, and stabbed her without mercy. He then gathered together the property of his victims, slept a short time in a chair, and went to a friend of his in the city, It was at his friends' that he was apprehended; he has been tried and sentenced to be degraded from the ecclesiastical functions, and his head struck off.

London Paper.

A REMARKABLE TIME PIECE.

In 1765, Mr. Norton, of St. John's street executed for his Majesty, agreeable to the directions which he had received, a curious time piece, of which the following description was given in some of the journals:—"This clock has four faces, the first and principle of which shows true and apparent time, with the rising and setting of the sun every day in the year, by a morning horizon, which consequently shows the lengthening and shortening of the days, it likewise shows the time of the day in several parts of the earth. The second front has a solar system, which shows the motion of the planets in their orbits, according to Copernicus. The third shows the age and different phases of the moon, with the time of the tides at thirty two different sea ports. The fourth and last, by a curious retrogade motion in a spiral, shows every day of the month and year, and likewise the months and days of the week, with appropriate emblems. The calculations and numbers for the wheels for the solar system, were given by Dr. Bevis, and the designs for all the dial plates, with the numbers and calculations and mode of performig the moon and tides, by the ingenious Mr. Ferguson.

COMMERCIAL IMPROVEMENTS.

BOSTON, FEB. 15.

Perhaps no city in Europe, certainly none in the U. States, possesses greater facilities for the loading and unloading ships, the storing, purchase and sale of cargoes, than exists in Boston at the present time. The most astonishing success has attended the different schemes of commercial improvement, which have been projected principally by one active and intelligent individual, during the last twelve years; and in the course of that period of time, the noble pile of buildings upon India wharf, has been erected, and two spacious and elegant avenues, Broad and India-streets, have been built, where water had in many instances, previously flowed.

But one of the most remarkable undertakings has lately been completed. A new wharf or quay, situated between India and long wharves, has been projected upwards of 1400 feet into the harbour. Upon this basis, rests a single block of 52 elegant brick ware-houses, about 1,240 feet in length. This edifice, for although much subdivided, yet it forms but a single building, is of simple doric, with a high centre, surmounted by a cupola, which overlooks the surrounding country, and will form an observatory for public accommodation.—Placed upon the middle line of the wharf which appears about 50 or 60 feet in width on each side of it, this range of buildings produces a fine effect to the eye of the observer. The vessels at this wharf, from its advantageous situation, must be protected from the ravages of any gale however violent, which might in other places assail and injure the shipping in this harbor.

All the ware-houses have cellars, boxed in so tight, as to resist the ingress of the tide which flows around them; and the centre of the pile contains a number of extremely spacious rooms, supported by doric columns, for the accommodation of the public sale of large cargoes, which could in no other places be so conveniently exposed.

Five millions of brick were laid by the masons, and above five acres of land were made by human labor in the course of a single season.

One remarkable circumstance attending the completion of the project is, that the actual cost of forming the wharf and erecting the buildings, has not exceeded the amount of the estimate:—a rare example we believe, in the history of public works. This speculation was originally divided into fifty shares, each share being a warehouse, and a right in the wharf. The cost of the whole was lately determined, and the ware-houses and wharf rights sold among the stockholders for local advantages of position, and produced upwards of 50,000 dolls. ADVANCE upon the cost, or an average of 1000 dolls. a share. It is probable that there is no single range of commercial buildings in the world, which combines so many advantages of utility and convenience, with so much extent and elegance, as Central Wharf, in Boston.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, MARCH 7, 1817.

Honor to the Brave.—On the 18th ult. a delegation of five gentlemen from the state of New York met Commodore M'DONOUGH at Hartford, Con. by previous appointment, and presented him, in due form, with the sword voted to him by the state of New York. The ceremony was dignified and impressive—an address and reply accompanied the presentation of the sword, and the people were addressed by one of the delegation. A procession moved through the city to the place of entertainment, which was sumptuous, and after which eighteen toasts were drank. The whole proceedings were attended by the national, state and municipal authorities, and a splendid military escort.

Sir Gregor Mc. Gregor.—The Maryland Gazette of Feb. 20, states, that the rumour lately in circulation of this active officer having abandoned the Patriot cause, is erroneous, as well as several representations of his character which have appeared in the publications of this country.

A proposition has been made and advocated in the Alexandria Gazette, to petition Congress for the re-cession of that part of the District of Columbia which lies on the right bank of the Potomac, including the city of Alexandria, to the state of Virginia, to which it originally belonged, the measure is urged on the ground that the interests of the inhabitants are neglected by the general government, under whose immediate jurisdiction they live.

The Legislature of Maryland have passed a law, making the case of Duelling punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison.

"Ne quid detrimenti respublica capiat," "obsta principiis"—[Let us stick to the taxes, if we ruin the republic.]—Under this classical Jeffersonian-republican motto, a late Hanover (N. H.) paper contains eleven columns of estates to be sold, to pay the U. S. tax upon them and 20 per cent. smart money, unless the owners pay said tax and ten per cent fine by the 28th of Jan. past. This, (says the Salem Gazette) under John Adams would have been tyranny and oppression; under James Madison it is a wholesome regimen. Men, not measures is the republican doctrine.

Upwards of 80 families, says a Quebec paper, have gone from a town in the district of Three Rivers, and others are following; so that the town is in a fair way of being entirely depopulated. Their course is for Pennsylvania and Upper Canada.—Such emigrations are very unfavorable to the Province: and it is difficult to calculate how far the effects of such an example may extend.

Blessings.—The Vermont Republican of the 3d instant, advertises 4366 lots of land to be sold for the payment of the direct tax!

Whale Fishery.—We understand that exertions are making to revive this profitable business, at the port of Sag Harbor, on the East end of Long Island, and for that purpose to organize a company, and combine the wealth of the surrounding country.—Individuals in that port have become wealthy by that business—It is a healthy voyage, well understood by the Long Islanders, and has proved an excellent nursery of good seamen.—L. I. Star.

BALTIMORE, February, 25.

FIRE.—On Thursday morning last, a fire was discovered in the celebrated Tavern at Havre-de Grace, kept by Mr. James Gilbert, which was entirely consumed, with all the furniture. Gen. Brown and several other passengers narrowly escaped with their lives---and only escaped by leaping from the second story windows. The general first discovered the blaze and alarmed the lodgers---he then attempted to return, for the purpose of securing his effects, but was prevented by the fire and smoke from so doing. Destitute of clothing he escaped through the windows---his baggage was entirely consumed amounting in value, it is believed, to about one thousand dollars. A lady passenger, we are sorry to relate, received considerable injury from the blaze. The amount of property destroyed, is estimated from fifteen to seventeen thousand dollars. The flame is supposed to have been occasioned by some burning coals falling from the lower floor into the cellar, which was filled with combustible materials.—Gen. Brown is now in this city.

EXTRAORDINARY.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of great respectability in New-Jersey, who had lately visited Cape May, to his friend (a member of Congress) in this city

"We have had very cold weather. As far as the eye can reach at sea from Cape Island, no water can be seen. Immense quantities of Cod fish have been thrown upon the shores dead—many thousand wagon loads may be got on the seven mile beach; (a few miles from the point of Cape May, on the sea shore side) and the Ducks have suffered so much, and have become so impotent, that a dog will take three or four hundred a day, but they are not eatable, they are so very poor."—*Nat. ABORIGINAL ORATOR.

One of the most extraordinary men of the present age, has passed from the stage of life without teaching the world fully to appreciate his character. We mean the Indian orator and hero Tecumseh. The grandeur of his plans: the ardent, patient, bold, yet prudent inflexibility with which he pursued them, all indicate a mind of the highest order. The great body of mankind must always be imposed on by circumstances, and therefore will be little inclined to allow, that Tecumseh was not only an accomplished military commander, but also a great natural statesman and orator. Of the many strange, and some strongly characteristic events of his life, we are going to give only a little one, which we lately heard related; which affords an admirable specimen of his proud, ambitious, dangerous spirit, and of the sublimity which sometimes distinguished his eloquence. It was in 1811, at the council which general Harrison held with the Indians at Vincennes. The chiefs of some tribes had come to complain of a purchase of lands which had been made from the Kicapoos. It is generally known that this council effected nothing, and broke up in confusion in consequence of Tecumseh having called governor Harrison a liar. It was in the progress of the long talks that took place in the conference, that Tecumseh having finished one of his speeches, looked round, and seeing every one seated, while no seat was prepared for him; a momentary frown passed over his countenance. Instantly general Harrison ordered that a chair should be given him. Some person presented one, and bowing, said to him, "Warrior, your father, general Harrison, offers you a seat." Tecumseh's dark eye flashed. "My father!" he exclaimed, indignantly, extending his arms towards the heavens, "The sun is my father; and the earth is my mother. She gives me nourishment and I repose upon her bosom."—As he ended he sat down suddenly, cross-legged, upon the ground.—Nat. Register.

Boston, February 19.

THE CONVERTED JEW.

The Rev. Mr. Frey, who has been on a visit here from New York, has preached five times in this town—three of them in Park street church,—to extremely crowded audiences: of whom were many of the Clergy of this town and vicinity. On Monday evening, after an able and impressive sermon on the situation of the Jews at the present time, and the importance of the measures instituted for their Conversion, there was a collection of 223 dollars made in aid of this interesting object: in addition to which there were found in the box a gold ring and a breast pin.

One of the most prominent men in congress, is Mr. CALHOUN. He has been at times a warm partizan, but he has recently discovered much independence and ability on the compensation question, where he supported the sentiments of Burke on the "right of instruction."—He has accordingly been denounced by the administration as a "political changeling," and a "federalist in the guise of a republican."

Congress has received a great accession of talent and oratory in Mr. HOPKINSON from Philadelphia. He deserves the gratitude of his country for his opposition to a propensity which exists in congress to provoke a war with Spain.—Exeter Watch.

From the true American.

Mr. STILES,

As Col. Tallmage's attempt in the House of Representatives to deprive Van Wart and his companions of the credit usually bestowed on them for the arrest of Major Andre, has excited considerably publick attention, perhaps the following anecdote, which is derived from the most undoubted authority, may not be uninteresting. Andre was in Philadelphia with the English army, and was quartered at the house of Dr. Franklin, in which the Doctor's furniture and very valuable library had been left.—When the British were preparing to evacuate the city, *M. de Simmetere, who was an intimate friend of Andre, called to take leave, and found him busily engaged in packing up and placing amongst his own baggage, a number of the most valuable books belonging to Dr. Franklin. Shocked and surprized at the procedure, he told him, in order that he might be influenced by the highly honourable conduct of Gen. Kniphausen, who had been quartered at Gen. Cadwallader's house, that officer sent for the agent of the latter, gave him an inventory which he had caused his steward to make out on his first taking possession, told him he would find every thing in proper order, even to some bottles of wine in the cellar, and paid him rent for the house for the time he had occupied it. Not so Andre, he quietly carried off his plunder. I have often thought his character owes many of the beams which play around it to the fascination of Miss Seward's verse and description, of which he was by no means worthy, though there can be no doubt but he was a gallant soldier and in some respects an honest man.

*Simetere was a native of Genoa, who had settled in Philadelphia, and was the person who laid the foundation of the valuable Museum now belonging to Mr. Peale.

FROM PORT-AU-PRINCE.

Charleston, (S. C.) Feb. 15.

Capt. Kennedy, arrived here on Thursday, from Port-au-Prince, informs, that the expectations of an attack upon Petion, by Christophe, had subsided; and the forces of the former, which had been collected to meet it, amounting, as was stated, to 25,000 men, had been again dispersed to their different posts. Petion had seized upon all the piratical privateers in the ports of his possessions, and it was expected that much of the property clandestinely brought in there, would be recovered by the lawful owners.

From the following extract of a letter from Havanna, received yesterday, via Savannah, with which we have been politely favored, it would appear likely that the money transaction, mentioned a few days ago, may terminate in something serious between the British and Spanish governments. The letter is from a gentleman who possesses the best means of obtaining correct information.

[The Extract]

"Havanna 2d Feb. 1817.—I wrote you yesterday, by a British brig direct for Charleston, [the Mohawk;] but another opportunity offering this afternoon, by the way of Savannah, I cannot let the opportunity slip of giving you all the information in my power. I have already advised you, that a British frigate had been sent here to demand the money that a Spanish vessel had taken from the officers and crew of the British brig Tay, stranded near Vera Cruz, and that the government here had refused to deliver it up; this afternoon the frigate has commenced landing the guns belonging to the stranded vessel, and I am told intends to land every thing they have on board belonging to her, together with her officers and crew, which are all to be left here, and many think it will be attended with serious consequences.—There is upwards of an hundred thousand dollars in dispute: on one side it is said, the Spaniards took more than they choose to account for; and the Intendant says that he has submitted the affair to the court of Spain, and therefore can do nothing until he hears from home. At the same time, he claims the money as forfeited to the King of Spain. The captain of the vessel that took the money has been imprisoned, and will be tried by the General of Marine."

LATEST FROM GIBRALTAR.

EAST INDIA NEWS.

CALCUTTA, Aug. 27—Letters from Anjeer of July 7th, state that a severe action which lasted from 6 in the morning till 4 of the afternoon, had been fought between the British troops commanded by Major Dalton, and the joint forces of the Rajah Boni and other chiefs, in which the latter were defeated with the loss of 00 men—On the part of the British, Leutenants B. Weston, B. Ashe and J. G. Gooding were wounded; and 70 rank and file killed and wounded.

Accounts from Maccassar, to June 26, state that after the above attack on the enemy's strong fortified works, (June 8) he abandoned all his positions, and retreated; but our force was too weak to follow.
